Market Commentary

The January effect came into play this year with 2019 opening with the strong equities performance globally. US markets returned strongly in the first month with Dow gaining 7.9% despite government shutdown as the Fed turned dovish on the interest rate outlook. A similar trend was witnessed in the EMs with MSCI EM index gaining 8.75% during the month. On the commodities front, Brent oil recovered sharply in January gaining 13.1% helped by the renewed supply cut agreement by OPEC+ nations. The WTI outperformed Brent by gaining 18.5% due to concerns about Venezuelan crude supply due to political unrest and the imposition of US sanctions on the Latin American country.

As 4Q earnings season is underway, so far, the GCC companies have reported an EPS increase of 9% y-o-y- albeit in remains slightly below consensus estimates. However, top down factors including strong oil and the imminent inclusion in leading passive indices resulted in strong rally for Saudi- which gained 9.4% during the month. Also, during the month, Saudi Arabia raised USD7.5bn by tapping international bond markets. This was also seen as a vote of market confidence to the largest gulf nation. The kingdom intends to issue USD32bn worth of bonds in 2019 to cover the budget deficit. Saudi's public debt amounted to SAR560bn (USD150bn) or 19.1% of GDP in 2018, and the budget forecasts a rise to SAR678bn or 21.7% of GDP in 2019. A strong rally in oil and Saudi cues helped other GCC markets with Qatar rising 4.1%- continuing its 2018 trend. Also, Kuwaiti market increased 3.1% and both Abu Dhabi and Dubai gained 2.6% and 1.5% respectively during the month.

For 2019, our outlook for GCC countries remain mixed due to the impact of weaker oil restricting the fiscal space but supported by passive flows in Saudi and Kuwait. Also, despite the strong performance in 2018, the current valuations remain reasonable for key GCC markets. Overall, we expect the GCC markets to deliver muted returns in 2019 with risks tilted to the downside. Accordingly, our strategy for alpha generation is by positioning the markets opportunistically.
